

Footnote 23 should read as follows:

Jefferson graduates technically could have UofL law degrees, as another result of consolidation was University of Louisville-Jefferson “merger diplomas” being available for those who wished to have them. (There was also a LL.B.-J.D. conversion diploma created for interested alums in 1969, but no graduates from 1920 were alive by then.)